"Dear wife, I'm waxing near my end,"
The dying cobbler said;
"Soon to an upper world my sole
Its lonely way must thread.

"I fear, indeed, I'm pegging out;
But then what boots it, love?
Here, we have been a fitting pair,
And so we'll be above.

"My ills, I know, no drugs may heel
So it's welt to prepare;
We can't run counter to our fate—
Just put a peg in there!

"The future need not give you care,
I've left my awl to you;
For deep within my inner sole
I know that you've been true.

"I've always given you your rights
But now you must be left;
However do not grieve too much
When of me you're bereft.

"A last farewell I now will take."
He smiled, and raised his head,
"Bi-last the cruel malady
That lays you low," she said.

"I'll slipper way in peace," he sighed,
"The strife will soon be past."
His head fell back, he sweetly smiled,
And then he breathed his last.

FISHERMAN'S LUCK.

A Fortune Discovered By a Young Man in a Shark.

A young Southerner, who for some months has been enjoying himself in Paris, is the hero of an odd freak of fortune, and perhaps "fisherman's luck" has never been more happily exemplified than in his case. This is the story:

The young man—his name is Stanhope Randolph—is a native of South Carolina, where his father had large possessions in Colleton. He served in the Confederate army during the last two years of the war, though still two young, and when the war was over settled at Pocotaligo, poor as a church mouse. His father's estate was nearly all gone, and what still remained he resolved should be religiously devoted to the needs of his mother and sisters, who were now living in Barnwell in a very poor way. Young Stanhope Randolph had capacity and industry, but these were not sufficient to get him work in a State where all things were prostrate. He procured some odd jobs on the railroad, but these soon failed him, and at last, in despair, he shipped before the mast in a trading schooner that belonged to Machias, Me., and made irregular voyages between Boston, Beaufort, S. C., Havana and a market. In three or four years he got to be mate of the trader, and finally the owners began to promise him a vessel of his own, one now building, if he would purchase an interest in her to the extent of fifteen hundred dollars. His own savings amounted to nearly half that sum already, and he took a furlough from the schooner for the purpose of seeing his mother and some other friends, in order to try to get a temporary loan of the balance needed.

Money, however, was hard to get. No one doubted the security, but they did not have the money to spare. After several futile efforts young Stanhope Randolph was about to give up the pursuit in despair when his mother bethought her of Colonel Jacob Euler, her cousin, still living near Port Royal, and thought to be rather better off than the rest of the connection. Stanhope Randolph was only very slightly acquainted with Colonel Euler, but his mother insisted that he should take a letter from her to her relative, and thus leave nothing untried in a matter which so intimately concerned the pushing of his own fortunes.

When Stanhope Randolph arrived at his cousin's place on Port Royal sound he found that the family were not well prepared to have visitors. In fact, only two nights before, the house—an old brick mansion—had been burned down to the ground, and the family were now living in a couple of tents pitched on the lawn in front of the ruins. Colonel Euler had lost everything the house contained and was now down with an ague, his daughter was ill with hysterics, and everything was in confusion and disorder. In fact, as Mrs. Euler, pitifully told Stanhope Randolph, "there's actually nothing to eat in the house—in the tent, I mean," she said, with a feeble smile, "and the Colonel is too ill to go fishing to-day."

Stanhope Randolph did not show his letter nor mention its subject. On the contrary, he tried to make him useful, gave Mr. Euler his dose of quinine, taught Mrs. Euler how to rig her tent sails in a safer and more comfortable fashion, and then, taking a small negro boy with him, launched the boat, hoisted sail and went fishing for the replenishing of poor Mrs. Euler's exhausted larder. Well acquainted with the sound and its fishing ground, he soon caught quite a mess of fish, and was beating back again when a startled cry of the negro boy, who was by the mast, attracted his attention. The cause of the boy's alarm was a large shark, between ten and twelve feet long, which swam directly in front of the boat and seemed prepared to dispute its passage. The boat, as is common in those waters, carried a small harpoon attached to a long line, for the purpose of using upon the devil-fish frequently met there, and the chase and capture of which is a favorite and exciting sport of South Carolinians. Hastily calling the boy to the helm and giving his lugger sheet plenty of play, Randolph snatched the harpoon and line, sprang to the bow, tossed a large fish in the water and, as the shark turned up to seize it, drove the harpoon into his belly with so true an aim and such fatal force that the huge fish only struggled a few minutes before expiring. He was not able to get his prize aboard, but determined not to lose such a trophy of his arm's strength, took it in tow behind his boat and was soon able to land his cargo and tow in safety near the burned mansion.

Securing his boat, Randolph now sent off the boy for help to fetch away his fish, and amused himself by disemboweling the monster. His jack-knife struck upon something hard and metallic in the viscera of the fish and, examining it more closely, he brought to light a square, flat zinc box, about the size of a one-pound gunpowder can, much corroded, but apparently hermetically sealed and water-tight. He washed it off, dried it and put it in his pocket for future examination; then, the boy having come with help, took his fish and some tid-bits from the shark up to the tent, much to the joy of the occupants, who could not thank him enough.

Colonel Euler, to whom Randolph showed his box, immediately thought he recognized it as one of a peculiar sort of dispatch-box used by the Confederate Government for their messages by sea and in blockade runners, being convenient for carrying in the pocket and for throwing overboard in case the vessel was captured. The box was carefully opened and was found to be precisely what Colonel Euler suspected—a dispatch-box of the Confederate Government. The contents, in addition to some papers of no present importance, comprised a series of long dispatches in cipher, addressed to a well-known agent in Paris of the defunct rebellion, and ten certificates of deposit, promising to pay money of Ambrose Gunter's, now on deposit with the banking-house of X. Animas Freres, Bordeaux, to John Brown or order, when properly countersigned. The amount of the certificates in all was eight hundred and ninety-six thousand francs. "Worth nothing, of course," said Randolph, down on his luck, as usual.

"Not a nickel, my boy," said Colonel Euler; "but, nevertheless, you must come with me to-morrow and show them to Mr. Thompson. To-morrow is my well day, and I'm going up to Charleston to see about getting a shanty put up for my folks to live in."

In Charleston next day Randolph was taken by Colonel Euler to Mr. Thompson, and introduced to that gentleman, to whom he told the story of the shark and presented the box and its contents. Mr. Thompson eyed him sharply and asked him if the whole story had been told him. Colonel Euler vouched for his kinsman, and the ex-secretary opened the box, glanced at the cipher dispatch, and turned very pale.

"Have either of you read this?" he asked.

"No," said Randolph. "I intended to make out the cipher, but have not yet had time."

Mr. Thompson answered nothing, but taking the drafts out of the box, applied a match to the remaining papers and watched them burn to ashes with a sigh of satisfaction. "Perilous secrets," young man," said he, "and happy am I to dispose of them thus. Not only reputations, but lives would have been sacrificed had those matters become public. Now, as to those certificates—they are very probably worth nothing—but you have done me a real service in this matter, and more besides me, and if you can get anything out of them—and it is worth trying, you are perfectly welcome to it all. The money belongs to nobody, strictly speaking—for I do not consider that the late Confederacy had any heirs—and if you can get hold of it, do so."

"What money is it, or was it?" asked Colonel Euler.

"I am going to tell you," answered Thompson, "and it is a remarkable instance of the hard fortune of war that seemed to pursue the Confederacy throughout. You recollect the sterling cotton loan we made during the last year of the war—the loan by which our English brethren were made so sick? That money was raised to pay for ironclads, you know. The gunboats were built — the Stonewall was one of them—but not delivered. Diplomacy kept us from getting to sea with the English-built ones, and it was thought the same reason kept the French-built steamers from going to sea, but that is not exactly the fact. We would have succeeded in getting them out if they had been fully paid for. We made what we thought were ample arrangements for completing the payments, but they failed through our persistent bad luck. For instance, take the case of these very certificates. It was necessary for us to use all sorts of precautions in buying this sort of goods to protect the parties we dealt with, for we knew the Yankees would throw every mother's son of them into court. Hence the money was deposited in various banks in the names of private persons, but so that it could not be drawn unless the certificates were indorsed in a particular way. This is a deposit, you see, of Gunter's money payable to Brown on certain terms—in other words, it is a Confederate draft sent out by express messenger and payable when indorsed by the agent to whom sent. The agent must indorse it in a particular way, and would not do so unless the messenger brought certain credentials. This system of checks and balances was necessary for our financial secretary, but in this case, and several others like it, was fatal to our plans.

"The messenger to whom this particular box was intrusted—young Ricaud, I remember the very morning I sent him—was instructed to go to Wilmington, cross to Bermuda in the blockade-runner Fannie, sail thence for London, report to an agent there, and from him get further orders. Ricaud, instead of going on the Fannie, took another steamer, the Gannet, for Nassau. The Gannet was captured, Ricaud's dispatch-box went to feed the sharks and Ricaud himself to rusticate at Johnson's Island. Meantime we, who knew of the Fannie's safe voyage, were congratulating ourselves that our agent was on the road to Bordeaux, and we did not discover the truth until it was too late to provide a remedy. This sort of thing happened several times, and our French gunboats never got to sea."

"Then those Bourdalese still have our money?" said Colonel Euler.

"That remains to be seen. I was just coming to that point. This particular deposit has never been checked out—of that I am sure. It was quite forgotten. Ricaud never got South again till June, 1865, and then his little story was only partly credited. But whether Animas Freres will pay the money or not is quite another matter, and depends upon a variety of circumstances which it is useless to speculate about. As I said, I want our young friend here to try, and I hope he will succeed."

So saying, Mr. Thompson took pen and paper and wrote hurriedly. "Here," said he, "is a check for $600. You must look upon it as your reward for restoring to me those dangerous papers. It will pay your expenses to Bordeaux and back; so, if you can gain nothing you will lose nothing. I have indorsed these certificates with my name. Take them and this note to London to Mr. Brown. He will tell you what further can be done, if any thing. Do not expect much, but at least try—fortune may favor you; and I am sure you deserve it."

It seemed, indeed, as if Stanhope Randolph's good fortune had begun. Taking leave of his friends, he came over to London, found Mr. Brown and made such a friend of that gentleman that he undertook personally to look after the matter which Mr. Thompson had recommended to him. The ex-agent, whose indorsement was needed, happened at the time to be in Nice, and Mr. Brown went thither with Randolph and secured the requsite signatures. Then he accompanied him to Bourdeaux. Alas for the best laid schemes of mice and men! The firm of X. Animas Freres was bankrupt and all their assets and affairs in the hands of the syndic. The elder brother of the firm was dead, and there was but little hope of getting any thing out of the surviving brother, who, indeed, did not bear the best of names.

Mr. Brown looked pensive, but told Randolph not to despair. "If he's an honest man we won't get a cent, of course; but, as he seems to be a slippery fellow, there's a chance for it yet." He called on the syndic, consulted a notary or two in town, and then sent M. Animas a message to call upon him that night at his hotel. M. Animas came, a sallow little Gascon, with purple gills and an uneasy eye. He denied every thing, of course, and said that anyhow he was totally insolvent—couldn't pay ten centimes in the hundred.

"Exactly," said Mr. Brown. "Your debts amount to 8,000,000 francs. You have given in assets to the amount of 3,500,000 francs. You still have in your possession the sum of 3,000,000 francs, property of the late Confederacy, Brown, Gunter and all that firm. This money you have not returned to the syndic as part of your assets, but are trying to hide away. Now, M. Animas, it is a question of arithmetic between us. My young friend here has legitimate checks for 896,000 francs, which he is entitled to and wants. You will pay him or else you will prepare to-morrow to pay the syndic the 3,000,000 you are concealing and stand trial for fraud besides."

M. Animas wriggled and turned, and asked for time; for a month, a week, any thing.

"Not a moment," said Mr. Brown, decidedly.

"But my children, my wife," pleaded M. Animas in despair.

"Shall I call the officer?" said Brown, sarcastically, laying his hand on the bell cord.

M. Animas turned green, and then, pulling out a plethoric pocket-book, paid the money, and that is how Stanhope Randolph got rich.—Ed. Spencer, in N. Y. World.

IMPROMPTU ORATIONS.

A Species of Hypocrisy of Which Many Good People Are Guilty.

When a man is called upon to make a speech at any gathering, social or public, it is always "entirely unexpected." He has never imagined that he was to be asked to speak out in meeting, oh, no! And for that very reason he has sat up and burned up the midnight gas, the night before the affair, concocting a few extemporaneous remarks which will be neat and to the point. You have done this, gentle reader, haven't you? and—tell it not in Gath—we too, have been there. There is nothing so hard to write as a neat impromptu oration, something that will sound easy, natural and convivial. We have often begun a dozen times before the extemporaneous ideas flowed smoothly from the penpoint, and then we usually began in the time-honored manner of being overpowered by an honor so "entirely unexpected," or else by assuming a jocular air and saying that after writing a brilliant speech we had entirely forgotten it. Then when you are asked to speak, you say: "Oh, really, you know. Don't ask me. I? Why, I never made a speech in my life," etc. You must be careful not to keep it up too long, or they will not insist, and then your literary toil of the night before will be love's labor lost. And after you have finished, people will say: "What a clever man Mr. So-and-So is to speak so gracefully when he came so entirely unprepared." Then you will say disparagingly: "Oh, a mere trifle. Just a few off-hand observations. I know that I am no speech-maker." And you will be a colossal hypocrite, and glory in your hypocrisy.—The Rambler.

THE NECESSITY FOR TOWN IMPROVEMENTS.

Considerable has been done in the last year and a half in the way of improving and beautifying the city of Sonoma, both in grading streets, building sidewalks, erecting new buildings to fill up waste places and enlarging and modernizing old ones, yet much more is necessary to be done before the place will present the thrifty and handsome appearance that the chief town in so large, rich and prosperous a valley as Sonoma ought to.

The old Board of City Trustees did much in the way of widening and grading sidewalks, grading and macadamizing the streets, providing drainage for the public square and the four streets surrounding it, though they have left much for their successors in office to do before those public thoroughfares will begin to approach perfection, and we, in common with a majority of the public-spirited citizens of the place, invoke a continuance of the good work until all the sidewalks throughout the business portions of town are of a uniform width and grade and the streets approaching them are made smooth and firm; the creeks well bridged and made safe for travel at all seasons of the year.

We might here call attention to the fact that there are many of our citizens who have lots fronting upon the Plaza upon which are old adobes that ought to be pulled down and their places filled by good, substantial buildings of modern architecture and finish, suitable for stores, shops and other purposes. These could be rented at rates that will pay a fair interest upon the actual investment, and thus each person so circumstanced will be encouraging business and thereby adding to the growth and prosperity of our historic city.

Discouraging words come with ill grace from the lips of citizens of a wide-awake, growing town. If we would prosper we should energetically push ahead in business and devise means for the advancement of general prosperity, and though we may be pulling uphill, all should pull together with a hearty good will and success will be attained. There should be no pull-backs, no pessimists, but all should look upon the bright side and work for the general good in perfect accord.

Sonoma City is located in one of the richest valleys on the Pacific Coast, with a climate unsurpassed for salubrity at all seasons of the year, and, through harmony of the people upon business and social questions, can be made to rival Paradise in the matter of prosperity, contentment and happiness of the people. Our readers may think us a visionary enthusiast upon this subject, but we feel justified in making the remarks and expressing the opinions set forth above, and would remind those who may charge against us extravagance in our views, that a little spice of enthusiasm in an energetic, industrious and thrifty community is by no means unbecoming. And, in conclusion, let us exhort all to give their assistance whenever required in the cause of advancement in all things that tend to beautify and adorn both town and country. Pay your local taxes cheerfully and promptly. Do not grumble and complain should the public monies not be expended in improving streets, roads, bridges, sidewalks, gutters or sewers just where and when you would individually desire, or where it would do your individual property the most benefit. Be satisfied with the judgment, integrity and unselfishness of those appointed by law and your suffrages to levy the taxes for public purposes and disburse the public funds, and in a few years we will find here a model city. General prosperity will attend our efforts and we will be in truth a happy and contented people.

A Non-Resident's View of Sonoma and Her People.

[From an Occasional Correspondent.]

ED. INDEX-TRIBUNE: It is with true and unfeigned pleasure that I read in the INDEX-TRIBUNE of the success of the St. Francis' Church Fair, held in your town last month. I have known for some time that when the people of Sonoma were once aroused to feel the importance of a good work they took hold with a vim and brought about a victory. I have traveled extensively throughout this State for the last thirty years and I have never found in any town of its size a literary club as well conducted as the Clay Literary of your town. Your churches are well attended, and your neat, pretty school-house is filled with bright, intelligent, healthy pupils, who in a few years will be the men and women into whose charge the interests of the town will fall.

Sonoma has stood still as it were for many years. There was perhaps wisdom in this. The people saw no chance to rush on and make a fortune in a day so they contented themselves to plant trees and vines and give them time to grow and bring forth perfect fruit and have it in readiness for the market when the demand came. This was much better than rushing a poor quality of fruit and wine upon a glutted market and having it become a worthless drug, with no name and nothing to recommend it to a foreign market. By the slow process her quality of fruit and wine have become popular and now Sonoma wine is favorably known all over the world and will be forever more in demand. So the young people who are now awakening to the necessity of business activity may thank the good old people who worked patiently with the star of hope ever shining upon the narrow path they had opened for the good of the rising generation.

I see by the newspapers that there is considerable lively railroad talk about the Sonoma Valley, and I believe that this valley, enjoying as it does so many advantages for health and its nearness to a market, is destined to be one of the most wealthy as it is the most healthy localities in this State. And Sonoma, the unpretending, modest little town, nestling like a bashful maiden coy of her charms, beneath the overlooking mountain, will, at no distant day, be a city of no mean pretensions.

I see that the INDEX-TRIBUNE keeps stirring up the merchants and public servants of the incorporated town, and I am glad to see that the people have intelligence and manhood enough to appreciate the efforts of the editor in his work of progress and improvement.

With many pleasant memories of your beautiful town and good true people, and with best wishes for the success and well being of Sonoma, I say more anon. A. B. C.

Suicide of a Young Lady.

Mr. S. Talmage, who resides about 2½ miles from Sebastopol, brought the startling news to this city this afternoon that Miss Alice Sanborn, aged 19 years, daughter of Mr. G. N. Sanborn, a highly respected citizen of Analy township, had committed suicide. Mr. Talmage could give no particulars as to any cause for the rash act. Miss Sanborn spent the evening at Mr. Talmage's house, Sunday, and was apparently in a cheerful mood. Mr. Sanborn says that she arose Monday morning and cooked breakfast for the hands. There was nothing in her manner to indicate that she was other than cheerful and happy. Upon returning to the house at 11.30 o'clock, evidences of preparations for dinner were seen, but the young lady was not present. A search was instituted by her father and in her room, lying upon her bed, Miss Sanborn was found dead. By her side were two glasses, one containing strychnine and the other water. Mr. Sanborn sent word to his neighbor, Mr. Talmage, who immediately came to this city to notify the coroner. No possible cause can be assigned for the act as she had everything to make her life pleasant.—Santa Rosa Republican, June 7th.

Why Farmers Fail.

[Rural and Workman.]

One of the reasons why farmers fail is the debts they contract in advance of their crop productions. The farmer who crops on time and falls behind, which as a rule they do, and then again buys on time to bridge over the past year's failures, rarely ever catches up. The man who buys his credit with a lien and pays the per cent. charged can not expect to succeed. No business man expects such changes to bring success to the farmer, but it brings trade to the dealer; it brings the farmer into dangerous subjections; it brings to mortgage upon his homestead and finally brings him to a species of menial servitude, and brings him and his family to that very degradation that he has labored and striven to avoid.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

President Cleveland's Unostentatious Wedding.

A Series of Entertainments Planned in Honor of the Groom and Bride.

[From our Regular Correspondent.]

WASHINGTON, May 31, 1886.

At the White House now there is a quiet bustle of preparation for the Presidential nuptials, which will have taken place 'ere this reaches you. The preliminaries have been arranged for a very simple, unostentatious wedding, and Miss Cleveland, after an absence of nearly two months, returned on Saturday evening, to superintend the details.

The ceremony will take place in the Blue Parlor, and Rev. Dr. Sunderland of the First Presbyterian church, the President's pastor, will officiate. Mr. Ben. Folsom, a cousin of the bride, and the nearest male relative, will give the bride away. There will be no "best man." Of late years, when weddings are solemnized in private houses and in the evening, it has been the custom here to have neither best man ushers nor bridesmaids, and Miss Folsom will have no attendant young lady friends.

The wedding will be a much more exclusive affair than was at first contemplated on account of the recent death of Miss Folsom's grandfather. The guests will include the members of the Cabinet, their wives and about half a dozen relatives of the President and bride. A section of the Marine Band, with stringed instruments only, will be stationed in the main corridor, and as the bridal procession passes down the stairs, they will play "Cleveland's Wedding March," composed for the occasion. The parlors will be decorated with flowers, but not lavishly. This is in accordance with Mr. Cleveland's wishes. He is anxious to avoid all unnecessary display and formality.

Everybody is gossiping about the coming event. All are interested in an affair which has never before been witnessed by this generation. The marriage of a President in the Executive Mansion, and the curiosity manifested, is merely the penalty which those occupying high stations have to pay. An exceptionally large number of people visited the White House on Saturday, the day after the official announcement of the marriage, and roamed through the lower rooms. A number of Senators and Representatives also called upon the President and congratulated him.

In social circles the wedding excites considerable interest, but not as much as if it were to be a brilliant one in a social sense. Already a series of entertainments have been planned in honor of the groom and bride by his official family—the members of the Cabinet. Dinner parties will be the favorite form of entertainment given, but it is not supposed the President will depart from his custom of accepting hospitalities of this kind only from the Cabinet families.

The presence of a young and beautiful bride in the Executive Mansion puts in a brighter, gayer phase the hospitalities offered by Mr. Cleveland, and breaks most acceptably its five years' rule of bachelordom. At the Capitol it was the chief topic of conversation on Saturday. Representative Spriggs of New York, said, "the President is to be congratulated, Miss Folsom is to be congratulated, the country is to be congratulated, and we are all glad at the prospect. The presence of the President's wife at the White House will add another charm to official life at Washington." "I heartily congratulate everybody," said Mr. Bland of Missouri, the champion of the standard silver dollar, "but what I am looking forward to is the celebration of Mr. Cleveland's silver wedding." Speaker Carlisle remarked that it was the "regular order" and that the Chair heard no objection.

The troths were plighted here in Washington last winter, but it is said that the President having been Miss Folsom's guardian, feared that she might have been influenced by the relations that had existed between them. So he urged her to go abroad, saying that she might find through such a test that she did not love him, and in that case the fact of the engagement should never be made known. The lady protested that there was no necessity to send her abroad for a probationary period, but the President insisted and she went.

And now since everything is ready and waiting for the event but the appointed hour, the country has only to wait patiently. Doubtless it will be safely over by 7.15 o'clock Wednesday evening, with Miss Cleveland directing from a domestic, Dr. Sunderland from a ceremonial, and Marshal Wilson from an official standpoint. G.

Mrs. J. Phlean has lately reopened the Eureka Hotel in this place and will henceforth conduct it strictly on the temperance plan. The house has been thoroughly renovated and is now open for guests. We bespeak for Mrs. Phelan a share of the public patronage.

The ladies of the M. E. Church will give a Pink Tea Social at Union Hall, next Thursday evening. There will be vocal and instrumental music and other attractions. The low price of admission—ten cents—ought to encourage a large turn out, as it assuredly will. Those attending are assured of a splendid time.

The Agua Caliente Springs Hotel is already crowded with summer visitors. This resort is becoming one of the most select and fashionable watering places on the Pacific Coast. In addition to the already extensive facilities which have been provided, Mr. Cady will find it necessary to erect a number of tents to accommodate the numerous guests that are constantly arriving.

There is on exhibition at the store of A. F. Pauli & Co. a lot of beautiful stained glassware, consisting of fruit dishes, pitchers, tumblers, etc., which are given away to each purchaser of a can of Silver Star Baking Powder. Every can draws a prize. Many of these articles are worth three times the cost of the powder, which is thirty cents a can. Ladies are invited to call and see for themselves. *

A BRILLIANT AFFAIR.

The Sheppard Reception at Madrone Vineyards.

The wedding reception given last Saturday evening by Mr. and Mrs. Eli T. Sheppard, in honor of their daughter, Marguerite, who was recently married to Mr. G. F. Brindley in Columbus, Ohio, was one of the most brilliant and recherche affairs that has taken place north of San Francisco for some time.

The Sheppard residence, situated in one of the most picturesque spots in Sonoma Valley, was brilliantly lighted up and the grounds and broad piazzas were illuminated with countless Chinese lanterns, which lent a charm to the scene that was really enchanting. The piazzas had been enclosed with canvas for dancing and the interior of the same was tastefully decorated with evergreens and expensive articles of virtu. The reception parlors, which were tastefully ornamented with bric-a-brac from the realms of the Mikado, presented a dazzling scene of animation, while the hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Sheppard was manifested everywhere.

After each guest had been presented to the newly married couple, the sweet strains of music were heard coming from the piazza, when those so inclined joined in the soul-stirring waltz. Dancing was continued until midnight, when all were invited to the dining room, where an elegant collation was served. The table looked beautiful. In the center was erected a large pyramid of pure white flowers around the base of which was a collection of choice tropical fruits, and surrounding the same was spread the choicest of edibles, the ice cream and confectionary being served by the Maison Doree of San Francisco. After doing justice to the menu the guests repaired to the parlor, where they were entertained with some fine singing by Miss Annie Sheppard.

The bride, a lovely brunette, is the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sheppard and is a highly accomplished and charming young lady. The groom is a tall, handsome and dignified young gentleman and belongs to an old and aristocratic English family. Mr. and Mrs. Brindley will make the Marone Vineyards their home for the present.

The toilets of many of the ladies were extremely rich, but want of space forbids a description.

The following were present:

Mr. and Mrs. Horace Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. Eli T. Sheppard, Mr. and Mrs. G. F. Brindley, Capt. and Mrs. H. E. Boyes, Mr. and Mrs. C D. Haven, Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Corbaley, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Stuart, Mr. and Mrs. Watriss, Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Weems, Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Granice, Mrs. Col. Rogers, The Misses Belle Grant, Annie Sheppard, Isabella Stuart, Maud Beaufort, Augusta Stephens, Belle Wallace, Emma Saunders, Josie Dunn, Annie Pemberton, Mamie Rogers, Apura Rogers. Messrs. E. Thompson, C. Haven, W. Haven, W. R. Rogers, Henry Rogers, Sam Lewis, Thomas Basso, T. Storm, Otto Rufus, T. D. Morris, J. H. Madison, Dr. H. H. Davis, O. B. Shaw, J. Chauvet, Harry L. Wilson, Mr. Chauvet, Mr. Dougherty.

The Excursion.

The excursion to Glen Ellen Park, which passed through here on Wednesday last, was simply immense. At least 2,000 people were aboard the cars which were hauled by two engines. The excursionists were a good natured and jovial set, and although packed inside the cars like sardines in a box, they made the best of their situation. Everything passed off very pleasantly on the picnic grounds and nothing took place to mar the pleasures of the day. Glen Ellen is becoming quite popular as a picnic resort. It is certainly one of the loveliest spots in the State, and when the time is reduced between San Francisco and the picnic grounds by the contemplated connection with Novato, Belmont and other famous resorts for excursionists, within a short distance of the city, will have to look well to their laurels.

Congregational Church Concert.

The concert given by the ladies of the Congregational church on Thursday evening last, was a success. The following program was excellently rendered and well applauded: Music, Band; recitation, Miss Zoe Clark; song, Miss Sophia Wilson; violin and piano, duet, Master and Miss Hartman; solo, Mrs. J. P. Weems; song, Floy McCoy; music, Band; solo, Miss Kelly; recitation, Miss Rose Wilson; solo, Mrs. J. P. Weems; violin and piano, duet, Master and Miss Hartman; solo, Miss Kelly; recitation, Miss Emma Hope; music, Band.

Jesse Burris left for Visalia, Tulare county, on Thursday last. He has been subpœnaed as a witness in the land suit of Pendergrass vs. Burris, which comes up for trial in the Superior Court of that county, next Monday.

Closing Exercises.

The closing exercises of the Sonoma Public School, Mrs. F. McG. Martin principal, held in the school rooms on Friday afternoon of last week, were of a very pleasing character. The program was excellently rendered, each scholar showing marked improvement, especially the younger pupils. On the blackboard was noticed a number of drawings executed by Miss Susie Shaw, which were the subject of much favorable comment by the spectators. This young lady by persevering will make an artist of no mean order. Both the teachers and scholars must have been pleased to see so many parents and visitors present, while the parents themselves must have felt well repaid for attending the closing of the term. Such reunions are truly pleasant and prove of mutual advantage to visitors and pupils, as they give strength and encouragement to the instructors and energy and confidence to the youthful candidates for just praise. After the exercises had been carried out, B. F. Campbell, one of the Trustees, made a few well chosen remarks, in which he announced that hereafter promotions would be made in June as in other schools.

Whirlwind.

Between twelve and one o'clock on Friday afternoon, an immense whirlwind formed on the corner of Napa and Broadway streets. It was about twenty feet in diameter and extended high up into the heavens. Waste papers and large quantities of dust were borne up for a distance of a thousand yards, almost obscuring the sun for a few seconds. It lasted about five minutes and was the largest we have ever witnessed in this State.

Painful Accident.

W. P. Wilson, the well known painter, met with quite a painful accident in San Francisco, on Wednesday. In alighting from a cab, he stepped on an orange peel which caused him to slip and he fell heavily to the pavement, sustaining an injury to his spine, which will probably confine him to his house for some time.

Died from His Injuries.

Ex-Mayor James P. Clark of Santa Rosa, was thrown from his carriage, in that city, on Monday last, and received injuries which caused his death on the following Thursday. He was a native of Tennessee, aged 62 years.

SANTA ROSA ITEMS.

[Santa Rosa Democrat.]

Merchants are complaining of dull times at present. Most of the people are detained at home harvesting their crops.

The demand for harvest hands through this section was never greater. There is no excuse for a man being idle now.

At 7.20 o'clock Sunday evening, occurred one of the heaviest earthquakes felt in this section of the country for many years. The vibration was from east to west and lasted about six seconds.

Jim Clark, proprietor of the Fashion Livery Stables, while returning from his ranch, Monday evening, was thrown from his wagon and sustained a serious fracture of three ribs, and other painful bruises.

Walter King, watchmaker and jeweler, in the employ of Mr. Gardener, on Fourth street, while turning steel on a lathe, Saturday, was struck in the right eye by a few of the detached pieces. The eye is badly inflamed, and it will require several days to recover its use.

Our readers will remember the narrow escape which T. S. Merchant of Healdsburg had several weeks ago when traveling on a stage in the mines. Several of the passengers, he among the number, were wounded by shots fired by robbers. Mr. Merchant held the driver in his arms, who was mortally wounded, and who bled profusely, till the next stopping place was reached. Mr. Merchant had in his pocket at the time an assessment roll which had been made out by a party in that section which was to be sent here. The roll reached Santa Rosa on Monday, and was red from the blood which had soaked through Mr. M.'s clothing from the wounded man.

Excitement in Texas.

Great excitement has been caused in the vicinity of Paris, Texas, by the remarkable recovery of Mr. J. E. Corley, who was so helpless he could not turn in bed, or raise his head; everybody said he was dying of Consumption. A trial bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery was sent him. Finding relief, he bought a large bottle and a box of Dr. King's New Life Pills; by the time he had taken two boxes of Pills and two bottles of the Discovery, he was well and had gained in flesh thirty-six pounds. Trial bottles of this Great Discovery for Consumption free at all Drug Stores. 2

GLEN ELLEN SQUIBS.

Sonoma and Santa Rosa visitors were quite numerous last week.

Ed. Man has bought an interest in the butcher shop of James Gibson.

Mrs. John Gibson, who has had a bad spell of asthma is recovering rapidly.

The grape and fruit crop in this vicinity will be large and of excellent quality.

Politics do not trouble us much, but we notice candidates for office in close proximinity.

Fishing is still good along the creek, a great many and of large size are caught every day.

The weather is quite warm, the thermometer standing at 100 in the shade several days this week.

James Shaw and J. H. Drummond were elected Trustees of the Dunbar School District last Saturday.

John Small has opened his store and is ready for business. He keeps tropical fruits and candies in great variety.

E. T. Mills, the reporter of the Santa Rosa "Republican," passed through here last week. He was chock full of business.

The Committee of Arrangements for the celebration of the glorious Fourth in this place state that everything necessary to be done has been attended to and that the celebration will undoubtedly be a grand success. OLD TIMER.

Undigested Food

In the stomach develops an acid which stings the upper part of the throat and palate, causing "heartburn." It also evolves a gas which produces "wind on the stomach," and a feeling and appearance of distension in that organ after eating. For both this acidity and swelling Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is a much better remedy than alkaline salts, like hartshorn and carbonate of soda. A wineglassful of the bitters, after or before dinner, will be found to act as a reliable carminative or preventive. This fine specific for dyspepsia, both in its acute and chronic form, also prevents and cures malarial fever, constipation, liver complaint, kidney troubles, nervousness and debility. Persons who observe in themselves a decline of vigor should use this fine tonic without delay.

Bucklen's Arnica Salve.

The best salve in the world for Cuts, Bruises, Sores, Ulcers, Salt Rheum, Fever Sores, Tetters, Chapped Hands, Chilblains, Corns and all Skin Eruptions, and positively cures Piles, or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For sale by all drug stores.

TORTURED BY INDIANS.

Horrible Experience of a Young Man—The Apache Devils.

[Chico Chronicle, June 2.]

A sick and sorry-looking specimen of humanity stepped from the passenger train last night, and climbed into a waiting wagon and was driven to the country. His name is Samuel Neff. He is a man of about 30 years of age, and his parents reside on Pine Creek. Young Neff is just home from Arizona, where he has been prospecting in the mines and acting as a scout on the hunt for Indians. Unfortunately for him he found the murderous red devils, and they almost made mince meat of him. One day while riding through a canyon he was shot through the shoulder and fell from his horse. His assailants finding that he was not dead, tortured him outrageously. They cut gashes in his face and all over his body, applied fire to his feet and hands, and ended their brutal assaults by scalping him. He suffered untold agonies, and prayed that death might relieve him. Finally he fell into a faint, and upon awaking he found himself being kindly cared for in a miner's cabin. The miner had picked him up and carried him a long distance on horseback. Neff suffered weeks of excruciating pain and raved with a fever, and soon as he was able to travel he took the road for home.

Last evening a "Chronicle" reporter asked Neff how it felt to have his hair lifted.

"It is a dreadful sensation," he said. "One thinks, as the skin is being torn from the skull, that his feet are coming right up through his body to the top of his head. Oh, it is terrible! It is so painful that you cannot utter a cry, and thousands of stars dance before your eyes. You imagine red hot needles are darting in and out of your flesh, and you clap your hands so closely that the finger nails cut into the flesh. I would rather be run through a threshing machine, ground up in a sausage mill or thrown under a locomotive than to ever undergo such another ordeal. It makes me shudder to think of the tortures I have gone through with, and I never want to look upon the face of another Indian."

"Do many persons survive the operation," interrupted the reporter.

"No. I have only heard of two or three men besides myself who have lost their hair by the scalping-knife and then lived to tell of it."

"Mr. Neff, do you think the hair will ever grow out again?"

"Oh, no; I shall always have a bald spot up there. The skin was torn off for a space of four inches square, and I am afraid it will never heal entirely. Even if it does heal over, the bare place will always be so painful that I cannot touch it. I keep my head tied up in cotton and sweet oil. You can see that my beauty has been considerably marred. These frightful gashes across my face will go with me to the grave."

"How do you think the Government is going to settle that difficulty with its pets?"

"Well, that is a hard question to answer. Those Apaches are as cunning as they could be made. They are skilled in warfare, have a brilliant leader and, knowing every foot of ground, they can steal and kill within gunshot of the settlements and then get away. There is too much leniency towards these fellows when they are 'good.' Every one should be shot down on sight, like a mad dog, for they can never be controlled. Too many valuable lives have already been thrown away by petting them. We might as well fondle a rattlesnake. I have seen whole families butchered and robbed of everything. The women are outraged and then tortured, and wherever a soldier is captured he is put to death by the Apache squaws. In my opinion the Government made a vital mistake in removing General Crook from the field. No better Indian-fighter ever lived. He was getting along well with his work. General Crook knew just how to fight the Apaches. He adopted their own tactics, and moved his soldiers without all the red tape requirements of modern warfare."

Mr. Neff says that he will put himself under the treatment of a Chico physician, and when he recovers he will settle down to work on his father's farm.

"See here, fellow! Who are you, sir?" said one man to another, who had jostled him on the sidewalk.

"I am a plumber, sir," replied the other drawing himself up proudly.

"Ah beg pardon, sir. Have a cigar?"

Amazing Conduct of Lawyers.

[Carson Appeal.]

Newspapers are apt to attach certain qualifications to lawyers, born of general contact with the profession. As a rule, lawyers are close figurers with newspaper men, and want the lowest prices for work.

Several weeks ago two lawyers called at the "Appeal" office and ordered some work. They wanted it in a great rush, and in order to have the work done in time an extra force was put on, and the regular force did not quit work until 4 o'clock in the morning.

Next day they called for the bill, and when it was presented one of them said that he did not like the bill, and unless it was changed they would not pay it. The proprietor said that the bill would be paid if he had to go into the Courts. The reply was that they didn't care what Court it was taken to, they would not pay it.

"What the deuce is the matter with the bill?" was the query.

"You haven't charged us with the inconvenience we have put you to—keeping you up at night, and bothering and badgering you almost to death. The bill doesn't strike us as large enough."

Two printers in the composing room fell off their stools in astonishment, and the foreman of the job office, after recovering from his faint, made out a new bill for double the amount, which was paid on the spot.

Once in a while lawyers come into the world who act in this way, but, in our opinion, their real place is in a dime museum, or in a peach-blow vase or orchid collection.

This item has laid on our mind for several weeks and we have finally concluded to publish it.

The Tramp's Ride.

"Beating one's way on the passenger trains is not an easy thing to do on the Pacific roads," said a traveler from the West, "but during my last trip I saw a most novel expedient employed by a tramp. Early one morning, when we were pretty well up in the mountains, I got up and dressed and took a chair out on the platform for a bit of fresh air. Presently the train stopped at a water tank and I jumped down to the ground to stretch my legs a moment. As I walked up ahead I was surprised to hear a snore. 'Can it be possible,' I thought, 'that there is anybody who can snore loud enough to be heard through the double floor of a sleeping car?' The snoring seemed to come from under the coach, and so I resolved on a closer look. Bending down, I glanced under the body of the car, and saw there a scene which struck me as being about the oddest I had ever witnessed. In a hammock, which he had evidently stolen from some dooryard in California, lay a tramp, sleeping soundly and snoring noisily. The hammock was swung under the car, close to the floor, and one leg of its occupant hung out and trailed rather close to the ground. In that queer bed his trampship had been riding all night, without ticket or birth-check, and with no fear of being compelled to join in $2-all-round for the benefit of the porter at the end of his journey.

He rode some fifty miles further before he was discovered and bounced, and then strode off in search of food and to wait until night before resuming his journey under another palace car."

Patents Granted.

The following patents were granted to citizens of the Pacific States during the past week, and reported expressly for the INDEX-TRIBUNE: F. Miller, Olema, car coupling; F. Miller, Mendocino, insertible saw tooth; J. E. Packard, Mendocino, vehicle brake; S. D. Paxton, Ukiah, animal shears; C. Wolff, ironing machine; A. Buchten, ink remover; C. F. B. Caspari, fruit drier; A. Cerruti, can filler; W. W. Sherman, gas burner; A. B. Smith, propeller; J. T. White, chart; C. Watson, piston rod packing; all of San Francisco.

Faithlessness of the Dancing Man.

[London Punch.]

Hostess—You're not dancing, Miss Plumpington? Shall I get you a partner?

Miss Plumpington—Oh, I always get plenty of partners; but I'm rather near-sighted, you know, and somehow I can never manage to find them!

Henry Clay once accused John Randolph of being an aristocrat. In a voice whose shrill, piercing tones penetrated every ear in the House, Randolph exclaimed: "If a man is known by the company he keeps, the gentleman who has just sat down is more of an aristocrat than I claim to be; for he spends most of his nights in the company of kings and queens and knaves."

The reason why the gifted are so apt to fall is that the devil seems to give their cases special attention.

AGENTS WANTED for the MISSOURI STEAM Washer

Active, honest persons all over the country, with or without teams.

JOHN C. EVANS, SOUTHLAND, Mo., writes: "I stood up and affirm that a Washer saves more hard labor and money in a year's family than any Reaper and Mower that ever was put on any farm with less than 100 acres in cultivation. If you will get any horseman that will take up your improved terms at this Washer town of the season, and save as much money as it does and sold no more, I could sell one at every house, if they had to take the Washer from under their wife and basket to pay for it."

JOHN R. DODGE, JR., Jeweler, NORMAL, Ill., writes: "You ask what I think of the Washer I bought last summer. Ans. It is the best machine ever invested by man. 2d. We have just as good dinners on Monday as on any other day. 3d. If you run short, you can use hens' eggs for glue."

I will ship a sample to those desiring an agency on a week's trial on liberal terms. A thousand per cent the best washer in the world for drying linen, clothes and soap. Pays expenses right along for money. Write for particulars.

This Wash Board is made of ONE SOLID SHEET OF HEAVY CORRUGATED ZINC, which produces a double-faced board of the best quality and durability. The fluting is very deep, holding more water, and consequently doing better washing than any wash board in the market. The frame is made of hard wood, and held together with an iron bolt running through a tube formed on the lower edge of the zinc, thus binding the whole together in the most substantial manner, and producing a wash board which for economy, excellence and durability is unquestionably the best in the world. We find so many dealers that object to our board on account of its DURABILITY, saying "it will last too long, we can never sell a customer but one." We take this means to advise consumers to INSIST upon having the NORTH STAR WASH BOARD. THE BEST IS THE CHEAPEST. Pat. Feb. 27th, 1877. ASK YOUR GROCER FOR IT! And take no other. If he does not keep it, it is because of its durability. If he will not get it for you we will forward one on receipt of price. PRICE { Family Size, 50c. / Laundry Size, 75c.
